up the main soor of his meeting those with a view of thing a seat anywhere as he saw it is I am supposing now that the Doctor's pews are free, and that the colored man does exactly at white people do, attempt to take a seat where, he pleases. Would the Doctor object? Or,

the pleases. Would the Doctor object? Gr, auppose a colored man wanted to hire a pew im Dr. Jeter's church, and on the main floor of the building, would Dr. Jeter object? I know he would most decidedly.

How can a minister of the Gospel (which knows no respect of persons) who will say to the colored man, "You are not good enough to sit here, go into the gallery or into the atrect;" how, I ask, can such a minister be taken as a judge of civil rights? He whose calling obtigates him to extend religious equality to every gates him to extend religious equality to every one, and who neglects his duty in this respect, is surely a poor adviser in those matters which belong more especially to the State. I have for Dr. Sears the very highest regard, but I think him greatly mistaken in his view of what will result if the mixed-school fea-ture of the civil rights bill becomes a law. Dr. Sears has an extensive acquaintance with Dr. Sears has an extensive acquaintance with men and things in the South, but his acquain-tance is known to be confined chiefly to those who in war times were known as rebels, and I need not wait long for the answer that would come to the question, "Are they the best fitted to give advice touching the civil rights bill!" If I mistake not, he made more than one visit to Louisiania while I was State superintendent of common schools, and I know that his afto Louisiana while I was State superintendent of common schools, and I know that his advisers there were chiefly of the class who hat the equality of the negro in any shape. And throughout the South, by far the largest perton of the Peabody fund is applied by Dr. Sears in the interest of the whites to the exclusion of the blacks. On the question of mixed schools, as proposed by the civil rights bill, I claim that Dr. Sears has had no such experience as would enable him to give an intelligent opinion. I have seen the matter iested under the worst circumstances, and without detriment to the catter of education. In the year 1872, in my report to the General Assem-Sin: I beg leave to express, through the col-
